Uzbekistan and Pakistan are joining forces to press the international community to unfreeze the assets of Taliban-controlled Afghanistan, which both neighbors would like to see shed its pariah status.

Pakistani Prime Minister Imran Khan said they had agreed to lobby on this together during a visit to Islamabad by Shavkat Mirziyoyev, Uzbekistans president, on March 4.

Both presidents have since September been urging the international community to release assets frozen after the Taliban takeover of Afghanistan in August.
