The entire Greek fleet has been mobilised in the Aegean Sea for exercises with the French following endless threats from Turkey that the Greek islands could be invaded.

A military source said that the "Longhi" exercise, which started today, is to ensure "high readiness." All the main units of the Greek fleet are now in the Aegean Sea.

Frigates, submarines, missile boats, gunboats, helicopters and fighter aircraft, including Rafale fighter jets, are in full formation and deployment, loaded with all their weapon systems.
