Kazakhstan is cooperating with Azerbaijan to develop digital infrastructure, President of the Republic of Kazakhstan Kassym-Jomart Tokayev said, Trend reports.

"Digital transformation is impossible without modern and advanced infrastructure, including in rural areas. Therefore, Kazakhstan is subsequently establishing a digital infrastructure involving international corridors and cross-border data flows. The country has started working on the Trans-Caspian section jointly with Azerbaijani partners to connect to world traffic concentration centers. We're talking about Southeast Asia and Europe," Tokayev said.
