President Rumen Radev believes that an unprecedented humanitarian crisis could cause an escalation of hostilities between Israel and Hamas. Fifty servicemen have already been sent to Bulgaria's border with Turkey, in addition to the 300 already stationed there, Defense Minister Todor Tagarev explained. The president said he was not at war with the intelligence agency, but that the government did not understand the nature and functions of intelligence.

A humanitarian crisis and global destabilization are the potential consequences of a growing military escalation in the Middle East, President Rumen Radev explained. Both countries, the UN and the international community must de-escalate the situation.
