Kazakhstan and the EU on Thursday noted a significant growth in economic cooperation between the two sides, as well as in European investments in the Central Asian nation.

Following a meeting between Kazakhstans Foreign Minister Murat Nurtleu and EU foreign policy chief Josep Borrell, a statement issued by the Foreign Ministry said: They noted a regular nature and increased dynamics of political dialogue at the highest and high levels, as well as the significant growth of economic cooperation and volumes of European investments.

Indicating that the two officials discussed current issues on the agenda of bilateral and multilateral cooperation and prospective ways to further develop them, the statement said Nurtleu and Borrell conducted an overview of bilateral ties within the framework of the Enhanced Partnership and Cooperation Agreement between Brussels and Astana.
