Greek leaders on Wednesday revived a long-standing demand for war reparations stemming from Nazi Germany's World War II occupation of Greece, during a visit by German President Frank-Walter Steinmeier.

Steinmeier ruled out German compliance, telling Greek President Katerina Sakellariopoulou that for his country, from a legal point of view the issue has been long settled.

But we remain committed to our historic responsibility over the occupation, said Steinmeier, whose three-day visit to Greece includes stops at sites of Nazi atrocities.
