Greece declared a state of emergency in the municipality of Santorini on Thursday, due to the ongoing earthquakes in the area.

The state of emergency will apply from February 1, 2025, until March 3, 2025, and aims to deal with the emergency needs and manage the repercussions of the seismic activity.

The announcement by Greeces Civil Protection Ministry states: We are deciding to declare a State of Civil Protection Emergency in the Municipality of Thera, of the Thera Regional Unit of the South Aegean Region, in order to deal with the emergency needs and handle the repercussions that have arisen as a result of the seismic activity occurring in the above area over the recent period.
