Kazakhstan serves as a geopolitical and geoeconomic bridge between East and West, Deputy Foreign Minister Alibek Kuantyrov stated Friday on the sidelines of the global investment roundtable KGIR-2025, Kazinform News Agency correspondent reports.

Kuantyrov said that the country is a key hub of emerging transport and energy corridors.

In recent decades, Kazakhstan has invested more than 35 billion US dollars in the development of transport infrastructure, including 21,000 km of railroads, 95,000 km of roads, and two Caspian ports of Aktau and Kuryk, said the deputy minister.
