Ukraine gains direct access to diversified and reliable energy sources, while Greece becomes a hub for supplying Central and Eastern Europe with American liquefied natural gas, Greek Prime Minister Kyriakos Mitsotakis said.

Athens and Kyiv signed an agreement on Sunday for Ukraine to import liquified natural gas to help meet the country's winter energy needs, as Greece becomes the first EU country to actively participate in the U.S. plan to replace every last molecule of Russian gas with American LNG.

The plan calls for U.S. LNG deliveries routed through Greece from next month to March 2026 via the vertical gas corridor, a newly activated pipeline system for natural gas that includes pipelines, LNG terminals and storage facilities.
