During a meeting with Georgian Prime Minister Irakli Kobakhidze, Armenian President Vahagn Khachaturyan assured that Armenia is doing everything to contribute to the deepening of relations with Georgia.

According to Georgian Public Television, President Khachaturyan noted that both countries strive for peace and stability in the South Caucasus.

" I am very grateful to the Georgian government for the warm welcome. I just arrived yesterday, but I feel as if I have always been here. This is due to the attention shown to us and the environment created for our visit. I am sure it is also thanks to the personal relations of the prime ministers of our countries, the reliable partnership that strengthens our ties," he said.
