Kazakhstan and Brazil emphasized their shared commitment to multilateralism, diplomacy, and equal international cooperation during a Dec. 8 political consultations, co-chaired by First Deputy Foreign Minister Yerzhan Ashikbayev and Deputy Foreign Minister of Brazil Susan Kleebank.

During the meeting, Ashikbayev highlighted the strong momentum in political, trade, and economic cooperation between Kazakhstan and Brazil. He noted that both countries view the agro-industrial sector, product processing, transport and logistics infrastructure, energy, agriculture, civil aviation, and digitalization as promising areas for joint projects.

Local production initiatives and investment in high-tech industries were of particular interest, as they offer additional opportunities to strengthen bilateral partnership, the ministry's press service reported.
