Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan has warned that ongoing disputes over the Karabakh issue could lead to a new war with Azerbaijan, new casualties, and further hardships.

I see headlines stating that the Karabakh issue has not been resolved, that discussions are taking place somewhere in Armenia, and the Azerbaijanis notice this, Pashinyan said during a meeting with Armenian journalists in Hamburg on Wednesday, News.Az reports, citing Armenian media.

They hear our opposition say: there are repressions in Armenia, this is a dictatorship. Azerbaijan responds: if there is a dictatorship, why doesn't the government ban all this? It means there is a hidden agenda. When they say the Karabakh movement is over, on one hand they say everything is finished, but on the other — go and discuss it, he added.
