China, Japan and South Korea will hold a trilateral health meeting this weekend despite Beijing-Tokyo tensions, Kyodo News reported on Friday.

Japan's Health Ministry announced that Health, Labor and Welfare Minister Kenichiro Ueno will attend the meeting in Seoul on Sunday. A Chinese health ministry official is also expected to attend the meeting.

Ahead of his visit to Seoul, the Japanese health minister reaffirmed continued cooperative relationship among the three nations. The trilateral meeting has been held almost every year since 2007.
