At the 16th Ambassadors Conference, Turkish President Recep Tayyip Erdogan stated that Türkiye is advancing its normalization processes with Armenia in close dialogue with Azerbaijan.

He stressed that the South Caucasus, which has long yearned for peace, is now going through a historic period, The Caspian Post reports citing Report.

"Azerbaijan and Armenia are closer than ever to signing a peace agreement. In parallel with this process, and in dialogue with Azerbaijan, we are also moving forward with our normalization steps with Armenia. God willing, we will take some symbolic steps starting from the beginning of next year," Erdogan said.
