Leaders from Eurasia are set to gather in Russias St. Petersburg over the next two days for separate meetings of key regional integration bodies.

The Kremlin said Saturday that Russian President Vladimir Putin will travel to St. Petersburg on Sunday to attend a meeting of the Supreme Eurasian Economic Council, which will address current issues facing the Eurasian Economic Union (EAEU).

In particular, it is expected that a free trade agreement will be signed between the Eurasian Economic Union and the Republic of Indonesia, a Kremlin statement said.
