Foreign Minister Ararat Mirzoyan on Monday reiterated Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan's warning that some opposition parties could trigger war if they win the June 7 elections.

Last week, Pashinyan cautioned that the country could face imminent war if certain opposition forces, which he described as being influenced from abroad, win the upcoming parliamentary elections.

Pashinyan said that some groups seek to revise the recently established peace. He added that if the opposition wins, war could start as early as September.
