Dutch prime minister Rob Jetten criticised Spains low level of military support for Ukraine ahead of an EU summit in Brussels on Thursday (18 June), where president Volodymyr Zelensky joined leaders in person, amid renewed backing for Ukraines EU membership and fresh talk of peace negotiations with Russia.

We certainly call out countries that are not doing enough. Winning the war also helps Spains security, Jetten told reporters ahead of the meeting with EU leaders.

When I say this to him [Spanish prime minister Pedro Sánchez], I get a rather long and convoluted answer, which is why I keep repeating the message to him, he also said.
