Under the strategic guidance of the two heads of state, China and Kyrgyzstan have maintained a steadily advancing economic and trade partnership in recent years, with bilateral cooperation delivering positive results across trade, investment and infrastructure, Huang Ling, a spokesperson for China's Ministry of Commerce (MOFCOM) said at a regular press conference on Thursday.

According to Huang, China has long remained Kyrgyzstan's largest trading partner. Bilateral trade reached $11.7 billion in the first seven months of this year, with fast growth in Chinese exports of "new trio" products – namely electric vehicles, lithium-ion batteries and photovoltaic products – as well as mechanical and electrical goods. Cooperation in services trade and cross-border e-commerce has also been expanding.
