Armenia should focus in the coming period on signing and ratifying the initialed peace agreement with Azerbaijan, Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan said, emphasizing that once the agreement is signed and ratified, it will have laid the cornerstone for the perpetuity of Armenian statehood.

Yesterday, I spoke about the history that we must create together, and it is very important to state how this should happen. My vision is as follows: in the coming period, we should focus on signing and ratifying the initialed peace agreement with Azerbaijan. And when that happens, we can state that we have laid the cornerstone for the perpetuity of Armenian statehood, Pashinyan said on October 13.

Earlier on October 12, Pashinyan made the following post on his Facebook page:
