Armenian Prime Minister Nikol Pashinyan said that in Armenia, the best way to avoid responsibility is to engage in opposition politics, making the comments in response to questions about recent arrests of clergy.

Speaking to journalists, Pashinyan said he did not believe any ongoing legal processes were outside the bounds of the law, Caliber.Az reports, citing Armenian media.

I assume you [journalists] will have more facts about these cases than I do. I do not have the authority to give instructions to everyone, nor do I think there are officials in Armenia willing to carry out illegal orders, he said.
